CHAOS

Synopsis

Ten years after a disaster reduced humans to one-tenth of the population, all social and legal structures have collapsed like a pack of cards. Too few remain to reconstruct, no sowing has been possible, and all animals have already been consumed. It is man at his most instinctive and destitute level.

Two groups imagine this desolate land: packs of orphaned children in almost feral state, living a nomadic life style for their own safety, and adults with their offspring, barely surviving any better off of their meat.
